

I believe the act of requiring the ability to tap into Voice over IP is a poor choice. This is due in part to the additional costs that will go along with this, the lessened security for our conversations to third parties, apart from the government, and a desire to see fair competition between communications carriers.